Are you trying to find or trace a missing person? People are searching for others for a variety of reasons, from a family member or friend who has lost contact, to somebody who has deliberately disappeared and wants to remain hidden, including people for process serving.

Tracing a missing person on your own can be a stressful and impossible task. At ITUS, we have a highly experienced team of private detectives with the skills and expertise to help with the search of a missing person, with all the up to date tools available to the modern investigation.

Our team has years of experience in tracing missing people. We use a mixture of investigative techniques including searching public records, business records, director information, and voter registration, together with other sources. Where necessary, we will carry out physical searches.

When we have tracked down the missing person, we will provide you with their contact details. Should you wish, we can contact the person on your behalf and arrange a meeting. In some situations, you may want us to produce a report, so that you know a little about the person before contact is made. This is most helpful when tracing distant relatives or people you have never met. We have an excellent track record of finding people and we are fully compliant with data protection and privacy laws.

When we do find the individual, we can provide you with all additional information that we find, including email addresses, other occupants and any landline and Mobile numbers belonging to that individual.
